

Federico Delfino is Associate Professor of Power Systems Engineering at the University of Genoa – Italy. His scientific activity is mainly related to: integration of renewable energy sources and storages into the power delivery system; modeling and control of smart power grids and sustainable microgrids and power systems transients. On such topics, he is the author or co-author of 3 book chapters and more than 150 papers published in peer reviewed international journals or presented at international scientific conferences and he holds 2 patents.

He has been involved as a member of several international and national committees in the energy sector, such as: - the EU Commission Task Force on Smart Grids; - the National Committee "Energy Efficiency Experts" at the Italian Ministry of Economic Development; - the Expert Committee on Smart Grids, at the Italian Regulatory Authority for Electricity and Gas.